

ABSTRACT

Andi Riswandi Putra. 2019. Students' Interjection in Speaking English. Thesis. Supervised by Syamsiarna Nappu, and Muh. Arief Muhsin. English Education Department, faculty of Teacher Training and Education, Muhammadiyah University of Makassar.

This research is written to find out types, classification and function of interjection in students English speaking. This research applied descriptive qualitative research in order to find out interjection in students English speaking. The data of this research is collected from students conversation by using recording to record students conversation. The participants of this research are the students of SMA Muhammadiyah 1 makassar at Grade eleventh. The analysis data is done by recording, finding and selecting the interjection that are found in students conversation.

The research findings shown that there are some interjection types are found in students' conversation and primary interjection is the types of interjection that are mostly used by the students in their conversation. Then, the researcher found some classification of interjection and expressive is the classification of interjection that are mostly used by the students in their conversation and the last is the researcher also found the function of interjection and emotive function are mostly used by the students in their conversation.

Keyword: Interjection, Speaking, Student.