This study uses qualitative research methods, data collection obtained from observation, interviews and documentation. This research was conducted at the pude people's market in Aska Village, Kec. South Sinjai Kab. Sinjai, which took place for 1 month from March to April 2023. The purpose of this research is, firstly, to find out the level of feasibility of trade in clothing at the Pude people's market, Aska Village, Kec. South Sinjai, Kab. Sinjai, second Knowing the fiqhi muamalah review of proper profits in trading.

After this research was carried out, it was found that the average profit taken by clothing traders in the pude people's market in Aska Village, Kec. South Sinjai Kab. Sinjai, namely 57.30% of the main capital. This average shows that the profits taken by clothing traders in the Pude People's Market are still within the scope of feasibility, because these profits are still fairly reasonable and not excessive, and also these profits are commensurate with the risks they take in trading clothes in the area. The next result is that it is also found that in sharia economic fiqh there is no firm argument that provides limits on profit taking in trade, the amount of profit to be taken is fully left up to the trader, but the trader is required to comply with all the sharia that has been stipulated in Islam. Profits that are appropriate according to sharia economic fiqh are profits that are reasonable and not excessive and profits that are obtained in good ways, not in bad ways.
